The Little House on the Prairie is located 13 miles S.W. of Independence. It is an authentically recreated log cabin, which served as children's author Laura Ingalls Wilder's family home from 1869- 1870. It is open daily May 15th- September 1st.

The Ralph Mitchell Zoo/ Riverside Park is a 124 acre recreation facility located north of town, 1300 n 5th street and offers fun for everyone. It includes antique carousel rides for a nickel, miniature train ride for a quarter, and miniature golf for a dollar. You can also take a tour of the zoo for free. The Riverside Beach Family Aquatic Center is also a great way to enjoy cooling off during the hot summer days. It offers different pools for the family a several features for hours of entertainment. For calm summer evenings, enjoy the concert sounds of the Independence Community Orchestra. The Independence Museum offers many artifacts from Independence history. There are over 20 rooms containing antiques and artwork from the past.

The Dalton Defenders Museum honors the citizens of Coffeyville who died defending the town from the Dalton Gang who raided the town in 1892.

The Brown Mansion was completed in 1906 for Coffeyville businessman, W.P. Brown. Since its architects, Wilder & Wright, had studied with Stanford White, the famous New York architect, the house reflects White's design. The house includes original furniture, carpets, china, and silver.

Neewollah Festival: Independence is also the host for the Neewollah festival each October. Neewollah <http://www.neewollah.com/default.asp> is the largest annual celebration in southeastern Kansas, and has come a long way since its beginning in 1919 as a way to keep playful pranksters out of mischief on Halloween night. For one full week Neewollah entertains people from all walks of life. Independence, a town of around 11,000 becomes a city of over 80,000 each year. Neewollah offers musical stage shows, a Queen Neelah competition and coronation, carnival, concessions, street acts, artist alley, and top performers in the entertainment world. The festival, normally held the last full week of October, is topped off by one of the biggest and grandest parades ever, a two-hour kaleidoscope of music, color, pageantry and just good old fun! (Neewollah is Halloween spelled backwards.)
